Are you storing up prescription medications “just in case”?

The COVID-19 outbreak has led to an increase in prescribing and purchasing of Rx drugs across the country, much of which is not related to COVID. Did you know that the average cost of a 90 day supply of a brand drug is over $1,000? Many are even more expensive! It is very important that we all stick to our prescription drug regimens to stay healthy. However, we should also be wise not to self-prescribe or stockpile costly medications that may never be used before their expiration date. Questions about your next refill?
